University to launch the Creative Industries Development Unit

The University of Central Lancashire will launch the Creative Industries Development Unit, based at Clayton Hall, Harris Knowledge Park, later today.

The Creative Industries Development Unit currently comprises of five graduates who were selected for their creativity to work on commercial projects to promote research and development, new product ideas and act as consultants within the creative industries sector in Preston. A wealth of creativity has been retained with the graduates possessing a wide range of design talent including furniture, ceramics, glass, silkscreen printing and graphic design. The University feels confident that the Creative Industries Development Unit will complement other initiatives to encourage graduates to remain in the area and aid the economic regeneration of Preston.
