

Erratum

Erratum to “Developing New Portals to Safety for Domestic Abuse Survivors in the Context of the Pandemic”

Nicky Stanley,¹ Helen Richardson Foster,¹ Christine Barter,¹ Claire Houghton,² Franziska Meinck,² Leah McCabe,² and Sarah Shorrock¹

¹University of Central Lancashire, Lancashire, UK

²University of Edinburgh, Edinburgh, UK

Correspondence should be addressed to Nicky Stanley; nstanley@uclan.ac.uk

Received 2 April 2023; Accepted 2 April 2023; Published 6 June 2023

Copyright © 2023 Nicky Stanley et al. This is an open access article distributed under the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited.

In the article titled “Developing New Portals to Safety for Domestic Abuse Survivors in the Context of the Pandemic,” [1] there were errors in the Background section. These errors are as follows.

“The safety of victims has been a core principle informing provision from the earliest days when refugees were first introduced (Hague, 2021).” should read “The safety of victims has been a core principle informing provision from the earliest days when refugees were first introduced (Hague, 2021).”

“However, a focus on safety has entailed secrecy with the locations of refugees disguised and with DA services lacking a public face and often a community presence (Haaken and Yragui, 2003).” should read “However, a focus on safety has entailed secrecy with the locations of refugees disguised and with DA services lacking a public face and often a community presence (Haaken and Yragui, 2003).”

The error was introduced during the production process of the article, and Hindawi apologises for this error in the article.

References

- [1] N. Stanley, H. Richardson Foster, C. Barter et al., “Developing New Portals to Safety for Domestic Abuse Survivors in the Context of the Pandemic,” Health and Social Care in the Community, vol. 30, Article ID HSC.14089, 9 pages, 2022.